

Technology in Opening Statements: Use It or Lose It? The Pros and Cons

The fact that we are surrounded by technology means we have to be smarter than ever in using it to persuade fact finders in court. This presentation outlines the pros and cons of the use of technology in opening statements. It includes valuable demonstrations to define when to rely on graphics and visuals, and when to rely on yourself as the most powerful visual aid in the courtroom. Topics include:

- Defining the biggest sins most PowerPoint users commit in front of fact finders
- Weaving technology throughout your story rather than overwhelming it
- Identifying the worst timelines ever and novel ways to communicate chronology
- Using technology to enhance jurors' retention of your key points
